Learning Outcome:

65% of participants will be able to identify biological differences between light and dark skin, recognize differing appearances of common skin conditions when present in skin of color, and increase their awareness of common concerns that may be unique to patients with skin of color.

Description:

Dr. Colleen Cotton, pediatric dermatologist, returns for part 2 of a series on caring for pediatric patients with skin of color. The differences in skin biology between skin types will be reviewed, and new common diagnoses will be covered including differences in diagnostic and treatment considerations.

Speaker:

Colleen Cotton, MD

Objectives:

- Identify common rashes in skin of color.
