DESCRIPTION

Our understanding of trauma and its impact on health and mental health has grown exponentially in recent years. Likewise, Trauma-Informed Care has advanced as a best-practice for clinical services and is crucial to providing the most compassionate and effective care possible to those in our care. Many individuals and organizations, however, do not have an understanding of all that Trauma Informed Care encompasses. This training will focus on aspects of trauma and how Trauma Informed Care helps to build pathways toward better clinical care and healing.

OBJECTIVES

Upon completion of this program, the participant should be able to:

1. Define trauma.
2. List three potential sources of trauma.
3. Articulate two potential impacts of early trauma and adverse childhood experiences.
4. Identify Trauma-Informed Care Principles.

INSTRUCTOR

James Campbell, LPC, LAC, MAC, AADC

Southeast Addiction Technology Transfer Center, Associate Director

James has worked professionally in the human services field for over thirty years in a wide range of clinical settings, currently serving as the Associate Director for the Southeast Addiction Technology Transfer Center. His passion is equipping providers to support individual and family wellness effectively and build on the strengths they possess, which he seeks to do through equipping the next generation of human services professionals to be skilled in serving those their care. He's a member of both NAADAC and ACA and is a nationally recognized author and speaker.
